Defiant acts of life in apartment block unleashes nationwide anger and protests over restrictions

Protesters against Covid restrictions opened centers in cities on Sunday to offer food to the needy and other needs, saying that anger and frustration had built up over the Communist Party.

There was heavy police presence in some areas where large crowds gathered in Shanghai, where protesters ignored the lockdowns imposed by President Xi Jinping's party, which called for "zero Covid" without it. It was the first since a blockade.

Democratisers have also reported an uptick. Beijing, the original Covid hotspot of Wuhan and Xining, the major for the movement after the new system was lifted, but protesters were often in a deadly fire on Thursday.

A video showed a crowd of protesters in a city, with some individuals holding up their phones or cameras. The protesters were seen in a public space, possibly a protest or a community meeting, with some individuals holding up their phones or cameras.

Assassination of Shinzo Abe

Prime Minister Shinzo Abe, who began serving last November, was fatally shot in the chest during a campaign rally on Sunday in Nagasaki, Japan.

When he died, the 66-year-old was serving in his second term as prime minister of Japan, spending more time in the role than any other leader in the country's history. He was widely regarded as a key figure in the country's recovery from the devastation of World War II.

Summary and welcome

Hello and welcome to the Guardian's live coverage of tensions between China and Taiwan.

I'm Samantha Lock and I will be bringing you all the latest developments. It is approaching 7am in Beijing. Here is everything you might have missed:

- China is to begin a series of unprecedented live-fire drills that would effectively blockade the island of Taiwan, just hours after the departure of US House speaker, Nancy Pelosi, whose controversial visit this week has sparked fears of a crisis in the Taiwan strait.
- Taiwan has characterised the drills as a violation of international law. The drills will last until Sunday afternoon - and will include missile tests and other "military operations" as close as nine miles to Taiwan's coastline.
- Ahead of the drill, Taiwan said 27 Chinese warplanes had entered its air defence zone.
- Pelosi arrived in Taipei on Tuesday night under intense global scrutiny, and was met by the foreign minister Joseph Wu and the US representative in Taiwan, Sandra Oudizik.
- Pelosi addressed Taiwan's parliament on Wednesday before having public and private meetings with the president, Tsai Ing-wen. "Our delegation came to Taiwan to make unequivocally clear we will not abandon Taiwan, and we are proud of our enduring friendship," she said, adding that US solidarity with Taiwan was "crucial" in facing an increasingly authoritarian China.
- In a later statement, she said China could not prevent world leaders from travelling to Taiwan "to pay respect to its flourishing democracy".
- Pelosi's trip generated condemnation from Beijing and sparked fears of a new Taiwan Strait crisis.
- China vowed "consequences" and announced military exercises in waters around the island on Thursday to show its dissatisfaction.
- Taiwan's defence ministry accused Beijing of planning to violate the international convention on the law of sea, by breaching Taiwan's sovereign territory.
- Taiwanese authorities have said the proximity to some major ports combined with orders for all aircraft and sea vessels to steer clear of the area amount to a blockade.
- While China's military often holds live-fire exercises in the strait and surrounding seas, those planned for this week encircle Taiwan's main island and target areas within its territorial sea.

Protesters against Covid restrictions opened another chapter on Monday as defiance took to the streets and online as residents expressed mounting frustration and bitterness on local officials and for Communist Party.

There was fierce police presence in some areas where large crowds gathered in Shanghai, where protesters chanted the Communist Party's national anthem called by President Xi Jinping during a rally, instead of national anthem, and waved it in some but not other neighborhoods.

Democracy activists have also reported an uptick in Beijing, the capital, for the first time since the start of the protests, but they say the government has cracked down on any efforts to do so.

A video recorded inside of a restaurant in Beijing, the capital, showed protesters in a public square in Beijing and other cities, some holding signs and chanting. The video, which was posted on Weibo, a Chinese social media platform, showed protesters in a public square in Beijing and other cities, some holding signs and chanting.

新冠疫情影响香港復甦信心

【本報專訊】香港經濟在經歷了過去幾年的不景氣後，終於在2023年開始復甦。然而，由於受到全球經濟不景氣和通脹高企的影響，香港復甦的信心仍然不足。本文將探討新冠疫情影响香港復甦信心的原因，並提出相應的建議。

新冠疫情影响香港復甦信心的原因主要有以下幾點：首先，全球經濟不景氣導致香港出口受阻，企業經營困難。其次，通脹高企導致消費信心不足，市場需求萎縮。最後，香港與國際市場的聯繫仍然薄弱，復甦動力不足。

為了提高香港復甦的信心，政府應該採取以下措施：首先，加強與國際市場的聯繫，吸引外資投資。其次，降低通脹率，穩定物價。最後，加強對中小企業的支持，提高企業競爭力。
